REASONS FOR "OLD CLOTHES WEEK."

It is to put real garments, even if second-hand ones, on youngsters like these that the Red Cross is conducting its nation-wide "old clothes week."

PLAN TO CLOTHE VICTIMS OF HUNS

Drive Begins in D. C. Today for the Collection of Needed Garments.

APPEAL BY RED CROSS

The powerful and intricate machinery of the American Red Cross has been put in order, geared and oiled for the collection during the seven days beginning today of no less than 20,000,000 pounds of worn clothing, shoes and bedding to be given to the destitute refugees of the allied European countries. This is intended to be the greatest campaign of its kind in the annals of American relief work—or, in fact, that of any other nation.

There are millions of refugees—men, women and children—in the liberated countries of Europe, and their lack of adequate and warm clothing is, perhaps, the greatest problem they now have to face, according to Red Cross officials abroad. The food question has taken second place; food is available although not of the desired quality and, to some extent, quantity, but the European sheep that gave wool to the American Red Cross have been devoured themselves to uniform material, and the factories that make clothes are largely out of business for the preceding and numerous other reasons.

District of Columbia Quota.

The District of Columbia's quota in this nation-wide drive is 30,000 pounds. Officials of the local chapter are confident that it will give even more than its share.

All the allied countries in the war-swept continent are to be included in the distribution of the discarded garments, which will be forwarded to Europe as fast as vessels can be obtained to carry them. Belgium, northern France, Italy, Czechoslovakia, Rumania, Greece, Poland, Macedonia and Albania are the nations most sorely afflicted.

Herbert Hoover's recent investigations into actual conditions among the refugee populations of these devastated territories disclosed such unheeded evidences of destitution and misery as to warrant his immediate action. To the American Red Cross he directed his appeal. Throughout the thousands of chapters in America, word has been sent to the suffering abroad, particularly among the women and children.

For the past week a systematic plan for the collection of this vast amount of material has been carefully carried out in each city, town and hamlet where the American Red Cross is represented, with the result that all is in readiness for this drive that is to begin tomorrow.

Change in Seasons Opportune.

It is considered singularly opportune that this plea comes at a time when a change of seasons is accompanied by a change of raiment. Therefore, it should not be a source of hardship or inconvenience to thousands of women who would ordinarily cast aside their attire or give it away, without stopping to realize the joy even one item would give to some half-naked victim of Hun barbarity. No one who has been able to describe graphically the utter poverty of clothes among their former inhabitants. Every imaginable piece of material that could be fashioned into a garment has been employed to keep life in women and children. Their homes have been and are in the dugouts of foe and friend alike. In rudely constructed shacks in many cases, and in cold cellars without even a sheet to cover their nakedness. Gunny sacks and floor mats, carpets, curtains—in fact, the most nondescript articles—have been pressed into use to keep their bodies warm.

Because of the vandalism committed upon their textile industries by the Germans these stricken peoples must look to America for help and there is every sign that they will not look in vain. Every one remembers the generous donation that was made last September for the relief of the Belgians, and now that the demand is tenfold as great, it is expected that the same cheerful and prompt response to the cries for aid of these clothesless millions will be forthcoming.

Character of Clothing Needed.

In addition to dresses, suits, underwear, shoes, stockings, socks and similar articles of apparel for men, women and children, bed clothing is particularly wanted. On the other hand, hats, costumes, silk hats, collars, walking sticks, trimmings of women's hats, umbrellas or parasols, shoe trees, feather, clocks, glassware and things which from their significance could not possibly have any usefulness, are not wanted.

Strong made everyday clothing, the plainer and the more durable the better, is what is urgently needed. If the coat be torn or the dress require mending, let that not prove an obstacle to a donation. There are thousands of penniless women over there only too eager to do the essential sewing.

All contributions should be delivered to the nearest police station or fire engine house, whence they will be collected daily.

"Do not wait until the last moment. Do it at once and lighten the burden of those upon whom will fall the task of sorting and repacking," says the Red Cross.

Glasgow once experienced a strike of grave-diggers, who demanded an increase in pay, shorter hours and six days' holiday in the year. They picketed the cemeteries and stopped the funerals, until finally the authorities yielded to their demands.

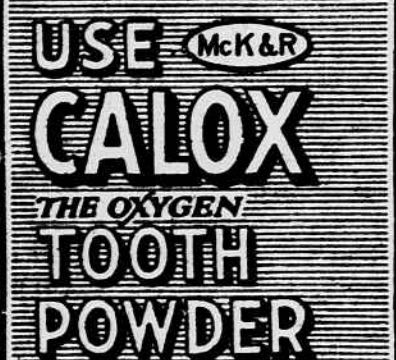

The costume of this young lad shows the utter raggedness to which the children of Serbia have been reduced.

90 PER-CENT GET JOBS.

Half Discharged Soldiers Applied to U. S. Employment Service.

The federal employment service, announces that of a total of 42,000 men discharged from the Army during the week passed, nearly half of them, or 20,500, sought employment through the federal employment service. Of this number it was said that more than 17,000 were referred to positions and 16,322, or 90 per cent, were placed in jobs.

Announcement was made that a staff is being organized in Europe by the service to help the men being demobilized abroad in finding jobs before embarking for home. Arthur Woods, special assistant to the Secretary of War, detailed to handle soldier employment problems, has requested the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to assist the emergency employment committee in finding jobs for service men.

To Traveling Salesmen

You are the soldiers on the merchandise firing line.

It is up to you to "get the goods on the dealers' shelves."

And your easiest approach to the dealer is to walk in with goods the dealer knows will sell.

Suppose you could say to the dealer:

"Here are the goods, and here are proofs of the advertising my house is going to run right here in The Star."

Would the sale be easy?

Just ask any up-to-date storekeeper on your list if he would be interested in that kind of approach.

Fashions Newest Millinery

Transparent Hats for All Ages

Larger drooping brims for younger women; smaller up-turned effects for those who insist upon looking matronly; and even clever little bonnets and toques for dear old ladies. The materials, plain or fancy hair straws and malines, the lightest and most comfortable for millinery in warmer months, not to mention peculiarly springlike. We suggest them for your Easter wear.

A large brim of decorative hair straw overlaid in maline and plainer inlaid hair straw, crown wreathed in blue posies. Brown. $20.00.

A more matronly shape of alternating straw and maline, the crown puffing with ruffles of maline and ostrich tips. Brown. $20.00.

A graceful medium-sized model of maline outlined in straw, with uncured ostrich tips falling over a folded maline crown. Black. $20.00.

Fine black lisere for the crown and the black maline brim entirely inlaid with buttercups, daisies, poppies and ragged robins in natural colorings. $22.50.

Lisere and hair straw combined in a large shape, with artistic tracings of straw flowers and a crown plastroned with beautiful posies. Brown. $22.50.

Or a similar combination hat with dainty pink heather and a gay nosegay finishing the crown. Brown. $20.00.

A fine hair braid with its crown and elongated brim shirred and ruffled in fine lace and delightful flowers grouped around the brim. Black. $35.00.

A toque for the elderly woman, of a flaky black silk braid, with the upturned brim formed by a succession of rosettes and run in tafeta ribbon, two posies and an ostrich tip for finishing. Black. $15.00.

And even sports occasions considered in an almost transparent hat of Batavia cloth, a new leather shade with navy ostrich rosettes wreathed and falling about the crown. $15.00.

Other hats of silk hair braids and straws combined with springtime flower and ribbon trimmings. $7.50 up.

"Madame Irene" Corsets

Correctly styled to comply with Spring and Summer, 1919, fashion demands; designed at the hips to give modish straight lines to new skirts; usually low in bust line to give a naturally graceful appearance to the whole garment; made of handsome broches, batiste and plain and striped flesh or white coutil, lighter or heavier weight, according to the requirements of the figure.

One of the new models is of a beautiful heavy broche, flesh color, cut rather low bust with a very long skirt and elastic inserted at the lower front. Excellent for the average developed figure. $13.50.

Another is of fancy white striped batiste, very lightly boned, straight lined, for the slender figure. $11.50.

And one of decorative pink coutil, with elastic at the waist line, rises a little higher in the back to support the shoulders and has a long straight skirt. $10.00.

A Very Special Sale of Philippine Hand-Made Blouses

For the Discriminating Woman Who Loves These Pretty Things

The material is the finest batiste, with insets of bits of real filet, or of Irish crochet. More or less elaborate floral designs are embroidered on some blouses. Others depend entirely on hand-run or hemstitched tucks for trimming.

There is great variety in the styles offered. Some have shoulder yokes across the back, some have Raglan sleeves with embroidered designs running from the elbow quite to the neck. Most of them have embroidery or tucks down the back—a becoming feature worthy of note. Hemstitched jabots trim some. And every one of them has close, well-fitting cuffs.

Description of the blouses would be impossible, but the things to remember are: They are of finest batiste. Every stitch is hand sewn. The seams are rolled and whipped by hand. The embroidery includes eyelet, blind and punch work. The sizes include only 32, 34 and 36. There are exactly seven dozen blouses offered in the lot.

The Prices Are $5.75 and $6.75

Blouse Department, Third floor.

Anything Daintier for a Dress Than White or Colored Organdie Embroidered?

For graduation and confirmation dresses, and for the Spring and Summer frock of many uses, there are white organdies exquisitely inset with white or tinted flowers and beautifully elaborated with embroidery. Some also show rich insertions of Venice lace. Then there are tinted organdies with all-over border patterns of white embroidered florals. Some come with bandings to match. 45 inches wide.

Price Begins at $2.50 Yard
